

BERLIN ART WEEK 15—19 SEP 2021

PRESS RELEASE

Berlin Art Week's 2021 Digital Journal Goes Online Today

From 15—19 SEP, Berlin once again will be putting the spotlight on art when many different locations of the German capital all jointly open their doors for Berlin Art Week. To shorten the wait and to whet your appetite for an autumn full of contemporary art, the Berlin Art Week Journal goes online today.

Berlin, 12 AUG 2021. Even before the festival week this fall, the digital journal provides a special insight into the art world of the German capital and the comprehensive programme of Berlin Art Week. There's a lot to discover in the new edition marking this jubilee year. As a thematic platform, the journal explores the unique ›Berlin mix‹ in its diversity and provides a forum for current debates. Various contributions take a look at the past, present, and future of Berlin as an art capital. In addition, interviews, essays, and pictorial spreads provide access to the content of this year's programme and the key players among our network of partners.

Familiar features like ›In Conversation‹ or the interviews ›Questionnaire‹ return this year, posing personal questions to artists and curators. In longer contributions, artists such as Thea Djordjadze, Elske Rosenfeld, or Ligia Lewis will be portrayed and extensive pictorial spreads take the readers on a journey through time, with pictures from the archives of Berlin Art Week or KW Institute for Contemporary Art, which this year celebrates the thirtieth anniversary of its founding. In the feature ›What's up today?‹, insider tips on Berlin's cultural landscape are also provided for your visit to Berlin Art Week.

Beside the journal, visitors to Berlin Art Week can enjoy the live and on-demand platform ›Playlist‹ that guides visitors through the week and complements the programme with audio and video formats like Sneak Peaks, Live-Videos, Podcasts and Talks. The ›Playlist‹ will go online in early September.
